FROMMER'S NAMES TULSA A BEST PLACE TO VISIT

Travel experts Frommer's have named Tulsa among its best places to visit in the United States in 2022. Frommer's cited the Greenwood Rising history center, the Woody Guthrie Center and the soon-to-open Bob Dylan Center among the many reasons to visit Tulsa in the coming year. Other communities making the list included Charleston, South Carolina; New York City; Las Vegas; and the Kennedy Space Center in Florida. You can view the full list here:

REGIONAL COALITION NAMED A FINALIST FOR EDA GRANT

A regional coalition led by INCOG is one of 60 finalists for a U.S. Economic Development Administration (EDA) grant. The EDA's Build Back Better Regional Challenge is the largest economic development initiative from the U.S. Department of Commerce in decades. As a finalist, the regional coalition will receive around $500,000 to further develop the project proposals and will compete during phase II for up to $100 million. The proposed Tulsa Regional Advanced Mobility Corridor aims to make the region a hub for research and development as well as production in the advanced mobility industry.

"We're honored to receive phase I of this grant, and we applaud each of the partners involved in the application process," said Arthur Jackson, senior vice president of economic development at the Tulsa Regional Chamber. "These proposed projects will support economic and workforce development, innovation and growth in the region, bolstering northeast Oklahoma's competitiveness. Our strong public-private partnerships allow us to position the region for long-term prosperity through projects such as this grant."

TULSA REGIONAL TOURISM SHARES REPORT ON RECENT TOURISM TRENDS

In October, Tulsa Regional Tourism - the Chamber's destination marketing organization - hosted its annual meeting and released the results of its yearly market analysis. The report from Oxford Economics shows that 7.2 million people visited Tulsa in 2020 and spent $845 million. From July 2020 through June 2021, Tulsa Regional Tourism recruited 62 new events to Tulsa and retained 97 for a total estimated economic impact of $227 million. Tulsa FMAC, the accredited film commission under Tulsa Regional Tourism, supported 41 film productions during that same time.

"As a result of the strategic, coordinated efforts of the tourism community, Tulsa is still on the rise," said Tulsa Regional Tourism chair Kirk Hayes, president and CEO of Arvest Bank. "And we have no plans of slowing down."

OKLAHOMA MANUFACTURING ALLIANCE AND OKLAHOMA OFFICE OF WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT LAUNCH APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAM

The Oklahoma Manufacturing Alliance and the Oklahoma Office of Workforce Development recently launched a statewide registered apprenticeship program for manufacturers. The program is targeted at relevant skill needs and will assist manufacturers in implementing a program designed around their customized, individual requirements. The goal of this program is to help Oklahoma's manufacturers find skilled talent and fill jobs. You can learn more about the program by visiting <https://www.okalliance.com>.

USA BMX, MISS USA BRING THOUSANDS OF VISITORS TO TULSA

In late November, USA BMX's Grand Nationals and the Miss USA and Miss Teen USA pageants brought thousands of visitors to Tulsa. USA BMX's 2021 Grand Nationals brought amateur and pro competitors from all over the world to compete for five days at Expo Square. Attendance for the races was estimated to be near 15,000 people per day. Additionally, the Miss USA and Miss Teen USA pageants took place at River Spirit Casino Resort. Tulsa Regional Tourism projects a combined $13 million economic impact from these events.

2021 BOOMTOWN AWARDS CELEBRATE TULSA'S FINEST

The Boomtown Awards is the premier celebration from Tulsa's Young Professionals (TYPROS) to recognize and honor those in Tulsa who further the TYPROS mission of making Tulsa awesome. The theme for the 2021 event—which took place Nov. 5—was “Boomtown's Finest.” TYPROS celebrated the legacy of young professionals in Tulsa and their mark on Tulsa's past, present and future. The evening honored the individuals, organizations and businesses that make Tulsa exceptional.

“We have been fortunate as an organization to work with each and every one of the nominees and believe the winning individuals, organizations, and businesses truly furthered our own organization's mission and values this year,” says Andrea Pemberton, executive director of TYPROS. “Notably, this is the first year of the Boomtown Awards that every single winner is Black or Black-owned. We are inspired by the Black excellence in our community, and were honored to recognize this year's recipients at the Boomtown Awards.”

As Pemberton sees it, there is perfect alignment between Boomtown Award honorees and the larger TYPROS mission.

“The TYPROS mission is to make Tulsa an awesome city for young professionals to live, work and play,” she says, “and we achieve that by being an inclusive and diverse community that recognizes the achievements of individuals across our city.”

In addition to being one of Tulsa's liveliest award galas, the Boomtown Awards is also TYPROS' largest annual fundraiser benefitting the TYPROS Foundation. Since 2015, the TYPROS Foundation has provided catalytic funding for placemaking projects that engage young people across Tulsa. This year's grant recipients were announced at the awards ceremony.

“The TYPROS Foundation was intentional in dedicating the grant cycle exclusively to Black Wall Street focused projects in 2021,” says Pemberton. “We had two goals going into the year. The first was to commemorate the 100th anniversary of Tulsa's darkest hour. We wanted this year to be a springboard that launches continued focus and growth on Historic Greenwood and Black Wall Street, and we hope these projects being completed in 2022 will keep that spotlight on Greenwood and north Tulsa.”

Pemberton says the TYPROS Foundation also aimed to do more than ever before, and to really focus its giving during this cycle.

“Our second goal was to challenge ourselves to put our money where our mouths were and give away the most we have ever given - $50,000 in community grants,” she says. “The TYPROS Foundation was intentional in the year's grant cycle to show our commitment to addressing systemic racism and promoting equity and visibility to underserved members of our community.”

According to Pemberton, response to this focus was beyond anyone's expectations.

“We were overwhelmed by the amount of submissions and ideas that were generated from this grant cycle,” she says, “and we hope that even more people will apply for community grants focused on Black Wall Street and north Tulsa in the future.”

TYPROS provides test space for ideas, engagement

In 2021, Tulsa’s Young Professionals–TYPROS–held virtual and in-person crew meetings, TYPROS 360s, and Pub Clubs. We installed “Connect to Tulsa,” an interactive art installation at the Tulsa Airport, and launched 918 Lead, a new initiative to prepare young Tulsans to run for public office. TYPROS held diversity dialogues and placed young professionals on local non-profit boards through our Get On Board program. We also built bat houses and bee hotels, held professional development series such as Success Series, and partnered with the Phoenix District on Street Cred: Eat 36 St N to create a pop-up food truck park, and much more.

As I reflect on our accomplishments over the last year, I am reminded of all the adversity we have overcome. It also occurs to me that it must have taken a great deal of failure for us to have had so much success. TYPROS provides a space to test an idea, help with a project, or get involved in an initiative with the intent to benefit our community. We also provide an environment where the cost of failure is very low. We learn from the experience of each meeting or event and constantly adjust in an effort to improve. I believe we must embrace failure and encourage ourselves to fail forward in order to succeed in our mission to make Tulsa an awesome city for young professionals to live, work, and play.

It has been my pleasure to serve this organization as chair. I’m grateful to all of our members, leaders, and community partners who have made contributions of time, effort, and energy to drive the mission of TYPROS forward. I’m thankful to our sponsors whose generosity allows TYPROS to engage Tulsa’s young professionals and develop the next generation of leaders. When we gather all together with a purpose, we can accomplish a great deal.

Whether you are brand new to Tulsa, or have been engaged with TYPROS for years, there has never been a better time to get involved than now. We are preparing to launch into 2022 with many opportunities to get connected and get involved. I encourage everyone to jump in and join us in the work as we connect people, develop leaders and build community in Tulsa.

2021 chair, TYPROS

AWARD CATEGORIES

Individual

Any Tulsan that has furthered the mission of TYPROS and made Tulsa a more awesome place to live, work and play in 2021.

Winner:

Tony Williams was born in Tulsa, in the Greenwood community, attending John Burroughs Elementary, Cleveland Middle School, and Nathan Hale High School. He is a serial entrepreneur, graphic designer, and clothing brand owner. He also served as worship leader at Victory Church for several years. Known as “Mr. Black Wall Street,” he can often be found on Greenwood Avenue sharing the history of the neighborhood and promoting its continued vibrancy. In his efforts to share his love of Tulsa, he launched his clothing line, T-Town Essence, which is often inspired by the history of Greenwood and his community. In addition to being an entrepreneur, Tony is involved in creative projects such as music videos, modeling, singing, and dancing; he even invented a new dance move called the “Greenwood Shuffle.” In this year’s Color Me True Parade on Greenwood, Tony portrayed Dick Rowland and sang the national anthem opening at the Drillers. Tony spends most of his time volunteering with the community, working on his businesses and keeping the Greenwood spirit alive.

Business

Any local Tulsa business that has furthered the mission of TYPROS and made Tulsa a more awesome place to live, work and play in 2021.

Winner:

Black Wall Street Liquid Lounge—a coffee shop with plans of expanding to a wine concept—offers a relaxing, neighborhood-centered environment that pays homage to the spirit and resilience of historic Black Wall Street in Tulsa’s Greenwood District. Founded in 2019 by Yvette Troupe, the lounge serves all of the coffee shop standards (e.g. cappuccino, macchiato, lattes, fraps, etc.), pastries, specialty drinks, and made to order sandwiches while serving as a co-working and meeting space for small business owners and local patrons.

Organization

Any local Tulsa organization, group, or non-profit that has furthered the mission of TYPROS and made Tulsa a more awesome place to live, work and play in 2021.

Winner:

Urban Coders Guild exists to provide computer science education access and opportunities to youth from historically underserved, underrepresented and otherwise under-resourced communities. Urban Coders Guild strives to educate parents, especially those of Black and Brown children and those of young girls, about the opportunities STEAM and computer science education can offer their children. And Urban Coders Guild recognizes the need to provide multiple pathways for students - academic, professional, and entrepreneurial. All students will be exposed to coding technologies, but in developing a viable tech ecosystem, UCG recognizes the need to showcase other roles within the tech sphere: IT project managers and business analysts, product designers, product developers, tech salespeople, as well as future tech entrepreneurs.

Legacy Award

In honor of this year’s theme, TYPROS wanted to honor an individual from Tulsa’s past or present who made a significant contribution to the city while between the ages of 18-40. The Legacy Award celebrates the past, present and future of young Tulsans’ achievements and can be awarded to a person of any age (even posthumously).

Honoree:

Tyrance Billingsley II is a Tulsa born community leader, entrepreneur and ecosystem builder. He has served on various statewide boards, had numerous fellowships ranging from policy to entrepreneurship and is heavily involved in Tulsa activism efforts. Tyrance is the founder and Executive Director of Black Tech Street, an initiative to rebirth Black Wall Street and a premier Black tech and entrepreneurial ecosystem and catalyze a movement of Black people embracing STEM to build wealth and impact the world. Tyrance's vision casting was key to catalyzing the Black tech movement in Tulsa and he hopes to continue to cultivate that vision through his work to honor his ancestors by building upon the legacy of Black Wall Street. Tyrance is passionate about technology and believes it is the key to improving quality of life and solving the world's greatest challenges.

2021 TYPROS FOUNDATION GRANT RECIPIENTS

Trash Talk Victor Lawrence Collins

Trash Talk is a collective project to clean up underserved communities and to begin engaging neighbors in an effort to grow our sense of community. After each cleaning, a space will be provided for a local artist to perform and share their talents with those who come out to clean. The goal is to form a deeper connection between the artists in Tulsa and the communities they represent. This project is receiving $10,000.

Church of the Restoration Community Garden Cooperation Tulsa

The Church of the Restoration Community Garden will bring Tulsans together to grow and cultivate food. The gardens will be managed by Tulsa's community, and decisions will be made democratically and intergenerationally. The CRCG will be an interactive means of learning food sovereignty, restorative land practices and community building. This project is receiving $5,000.

Mindful Resilience Courses Crystal Shaver

This course will focus on helping heal the trauma in the Black community. The idea is to give opportunities and safe spaces for Black people to explore, connect with and heal their traumas. The four-week course will examine how trauma impacts the body. The courses will be offered for free. This project is receiving $5,000.

Black Pride Week Black Queer Tulsa

This weekend of fun will be hosted by Black Queer Tulsa and will celebrate all the queer members of our community. They aim to bring the Black Queer community together with other races of the Queer community to form a bond and trust. They hope anyone from around the world who wants to come participate can do that. This project is receiving $10,000.

Greenwood Reflection Garden Tracy Gibbs

This reflection garden will be created at the Gibbs Shopping Center, on the east side of the building. This garden will remember and honor the survivors who triumphantly paved the way for awareness, education, hope and peace through sharing their personal stories of the 1921 Tulsa Race Massacre. There will be a mural with faces of some of those survivors, with QR codes that can be scanned to hear survivor interviews. The garden will be a quiet space to unwind, reflect and spark intellectual dialogue. Tracy Gibbs is a descendant of a Tulsa Race Massacre survivor as well as a respected business owner in north Tulsa. To honor her family and those lost in Tulsa's darkest hour, the TYPROS Foundation is granting this project $20,000 - the largest single amount in TYPROS Foundation history.

Meet the 2022 TYPROS chair

Wow, 2022 is here!

It is an honor to serve as the 2022 TYPROS chair. My TYPROS journey started in 2016. I was looking for a community of people like myself - young professionals that I could relate to, grow with, and have fun with. Pretty simple right? I did not know what I was getting myself into but the yield from this "risk" I took was exponential. I gained far more than I could even imagine.

TYPROS has been instrumental in my evolution as a young professional in Tulsa. Yet in that progression, I have been cognizant to the fact that this has not necessarily been the case for others - especially people who look like me. It is 2022, and in the 16 years of the organization's existence, I am the first Black chair. I do not take this first for granted, and I will do my best to leave a legacy that can be built upon.

It is my hope that all young professionals in Tulsa see what a resource TYPROS is and utilize this readily available resource to be the best young professionals that they strive to be. While that will look different for everyone, we are devoted to making sure that there is an equitable component in the TYPROS experience curated based on the needs and wants of our members.

As 2022 chair, I am dedicated to re-defining what professionalism is and what is acceptable to an ever-changing workforce. I am committed to expanding the accessibility of resources and connecting more young professionals to equitable opportunities within the city that will enhance their career experience. TYPROS will continue to be an organization that makes ideas a reality. It will continue to be a safe space where we say, "Let's make it happen."

We will be proactive and strategic, which is demonstrated by the launch of our newest crew - Tech Crew - that will focus on influencing growth and innovation while leveraging shifts in technology to unleash the potential of individuals and ecosystems in Tulsa.

I am excited to lead and work with the 2022 cohort of crew leaders, the executive team and the TYPROS Foundation board, aka Tulsa's best and brightest. I am also excited to work with, collaborate and build relationships with other young professional groups in Tulsa that are working towards creating a better Tulsa.

We have a stellar year planned for you all. So, keep up with TYPROS! Become a member, join a crew or eight, come out to meetings and events, and share your ideas so we can help make it a reality for YOU!

Happy New Year!

2022 chair, TYPROS

TULSA'S FUTURE SUPPORTS CREATION OF 4,125 JOBS AND $421 MILLION OF CAPITAL INVESTMENT DURING 2021

Tulsa's Future, the Tulsa Regional Chamber-led regional economic development partnership, supported the creation of 4,125 jobs and $421 million of capital investment in northeast Oklahoma during 2021.

Tulsa's Future is a collaborative economic development partnership that works with the City of Tulsa, Tulsa County, more than 200 private investors, and numerous regional and tribal partners to further economic prosperity in the Tulsa region. Since its inception 16 years ago, Tulsa's Future has supported the creation of more than 72,000 jobs and more than $4.2 billion in capital investment.

In response to the COVID-19 pandemic, in 2020 Tulsa County awarded the Chamber CARES Act funds to help tell the Tulsa recovery story to a national audience through a dedicated marketing campaign. In 2021 the Chamber pivoted to Tulsa's Future: Road to Recovery, a one-year strategic work plan that addressed urgent needs for recovery and attracted new employers and transformative projects to the region, all while paving the way for a new multi-year economic development plan to launch in 2022.

"Our team saw the largest uptick in project requests, site visits and general economic development activity to date," says Arthur Jackson, senior vice president of economic development at the Tulsa Regional Chamber. "We're encouraged by this positive momentum and feel our region is on the right path toward post-pandemic prosperity. We're excited to further support existing industry and pave the way for new industry growth. And we anticipate announcing additional projects in the first few months of 2022."

During the last several years, northeast Oklahoma has positioned itself to support the growing automotive technology industry. In June, electric vehicle manufacturer Canoo announced it will build a $400 million, 400-acre micro-megafactory at MidAmerica Industrial Park in Pryor and create 2,000 new jobs in northeast Oklahoma. In November, the company increased its investment in the region by announcing it will locate a technology hub and software development center in Tulsa, bringing an additional 375 jobs.

Other notable 2021 projects include RadNet's customer operations center and 500 jobs; more than 300 new jobs at TAT Technologies and Limco; a $16 million expansion at Whirlpool's factory distribution center; and more than 170 jobs at L3 Harris. Looking ahead, it was recently announced that a regional coalition led by INCOG is one of 60 finalists for a U.S. Economic Development Administration (EDA) grant. As a finalist, the regional coalition will receive around $500,000 to further develop the project proposals and will compete during phase II for up to $100 million. The proposed Tulsa Regional Advanced Mobility Corridor aims to make the region a hub for research and development as well as production in the advanced mobility industry.

"Our entire region is undergoing an economic renaissance," says Mike Neal, president and CEO of the Tulsa Regional Chamber. "We were extremely fortunate in 2021 to recruit Arthur Jackson to lead the Chamber's economic development efforts. Arthur and our entire economic development staff have quickly exceeded expectations, largely because they approach everything collaboratively. So much of the success we have seen despite the pandemic has been because of tremendous collaboration with our state, county, city and tribal partners. Tulsa Mayor G.T. Bynum, Oklahoma Gov. Kevin Stitt, and Oklahoma Secretary of Commerce Scott Mueller have all been especially committed partners. The work we've done in conjunction with INCOG, the Tulsa Ports, Tulsa International Airport, the philanthropic community, other area chambers of commerce, David Stewart and his team at MidAmerica Industrial Park, and all of our Tulsa's Future economic development group partners continues to make us a globally-competitive region."

Earlier this year, the International Economic Development Council (IEDC) recertified the Tulsa Regional Chamber as an accredited economic development organization (AEDO). IEDC also recognized the Chamber and the Cherokee Nation for excellence in economic development during IEDC's Annual Conference in Nashville. The Chamber received bronze rank in the category of Economic Development Organization of the Year. Cherokee Nation Principal Chief Chuck Hoskin Jr. received the Leadership Award for Public Service, which recognizes an elected official who has served as a committed advocate for economic development for at least 10 years in the public sector. Chamber President and CEO Mike Neal was awarded IEDC's Fellow Member status, which is conferred upon IEDC members who have achieved success in the field of economic development.

WHO WE ARE

Actionable steps to make diverse, equitable and inclusive integral to who we are

During her inaugural address, 2021 Chamber Chair Rose Washington-Jones spoke of the need to increase access to economic opportunity for more Tulsans. A regional commitment to leveraging diverse talent will be essential to ensuring northeast Oklahoma's economy remains resilient and competitive in the years to come.

This summer, more than 70 Tulsa-area organizations leveraged the annual Mosaic Inclusive Workplace Index to evaluate their diversity, equity and inclusion (DEI) strategies and practices. The index results provide both macro-level insights and tailored feedback for participants to help them improve their own DEI efforts.

A number of encouraging insights came from the results of the 2021 index. For example, of those organizations participating in the index:

69% have programs in place to develop a pipeline of diverse leaders

85% sponsor training or offer access to programs that focus on embracing differences and overcoming bias

83% take employees' religious beliefs into account when planning work or holiday-related events

87% have programs in place to develop a pipeline of diverse leaders

83% engage employees in community DEI work by encouraging volunteerism with diverse populations

2021 BROUGHT CHALLENGES, REASONS TO CELEBRATE FOR SMALL BUSINESSES

We entered 2021 full of hope and optimism for a better year from some of the life-changing effects of the pandemic. As the year presented itself, we found the road to recovery would also present new challenges, such as COVID variants, staffing shortages, and supply chain instability. The small businesses in our region faced these challenges with grace and dedication to serving their organizations, communities and employees.

Amidst those challenges, we also found many sources of celebration. As chair of the Tulsa Small Business Connection, I'm proud of what we accomplished this year.

We met with local leaders at every advisory board meeting, which provided two-way access and influence in support of the Chamber's mission and elevated the voice of small business. We gathered safely outdoors for several small business socials and implemented a Diversity Dialogue event series to facilitate important discussions around diversity, equity and inclusion.

Our annual Tulsa Small Business Summit & Awards was held in person this year and was a great success! The summit elevated deserving organizations for their impact and enhanced visibility for small businesses across the region. We celebrated eight remarkable award winners and provided a day of learning for local business leaders.

Just recently, we launched the BUILD series. This is a free professional development series aimed at providing education and resources to small business owners and their growing team of leaders.

Leading the Tulsa Small Business Connection this year was a great honor. Through the adversity our small business community faced, we found our circle of supporters and friends. An intense camaraderie has formed as we bond through the shared hardship and celebrate the good moments. And for these relationships, I will forever be grateful.

Tulsa Small Business Connection launches BUILD Series

The Tulsa Small Business Connection's new professional development series, BUILD, is now available for you to watch online. BUILD is a webinar series aimed at providing education and resources to small business owners and their growing team of leaders. The goals of BUILD are to educate and upskill the small business workforce in Tulsa, to help owners and operators create future leaders at their organizations, and to support small business staff engagement and retention.

The first three segments of BUILD are now available for you to watch or to share with employees for professional development opportunities. Additional segments will follow later this year. Modules are led by fellow Chamber members who share their insights and expertise on various business topics.

BUILD modules include:

Leadership 360

Bill Fournet, founder and CEO of The Persimmon Group, shares what successful leaders should focus on to improve team performance. In this Module, Fournet shares takeaways on how to better work together as a team, increase accountability and improve constructive feedback.

Financial Fitness

Denise Felber, CPA and Tax Partner at HoganTaylor, shares financial guidance on taxes, employee retirement plans and more that you can integrate into your business plan and cash flow model.

Communicating Your Mission, Vision & Values

Rosalia C. Cunningham, director of organizational development at Hilti North America, discusses the road map to building a strong mission, vision and values to better engage employees and customers.

SMALL BUSINESS SPOTLIGHT

Each week, the Tulsa Regional Chamber profiles a member business across our social media channels as part of our popular “Member of the Week” series. Many of these posts feature small business owners sharing their insights and inspiration, their challenges and their triumphs, and covering topics ranging from entrepreneurship and growth to strategy and community engagement. Here’s a look at some of our favorite profiles from 2021:

"Northeast Oklahoma is such an amazing place to be at this time. So many companies have the attitude that their employees are not just workers, they are family."

Cindy Hawkins
associate at Enhanced Benefits Solutions

"We are passionate about the hospitality industry – or as it should be called, the happiness industry. Our job every day is to make our clients happy and comfortable and feel like they have a home away from home."

Pete and Tina Patel owners of Promise Hotels

"Tulsa is the birthplace of one of the most affluent places for Black entrepreneurs. The spirit and legacy of those pioneers resonate with me as I continue to embody their resilience. The story of Black Wall Street increases my passion to honor their legacies as I work to build my own."

Dwayne Henderson
owner of Henderson Management Group

"Our goal is to continue to expand locally as well as into other large cities and states. We truly want to celebrate life with as many people as we can using our cookies as the special treat!"
