

THE TYPROS Business Report

The North Star for Emerging Leaders

POSTURE, POSITION AND CONTEXT

Tulsa is growing, evolving and asking bigger questions about what comes next. As our city changes, one thing becomes increasingly clear: the future of Tulsa will be shaped not only by today's leaders, but by the emerging leaders we choose to invest in now.

At TYPROS, we believe young professionals want more than networking opportunities or résumé builders. They want meaningful ways to engage with their city, opportunities to contribute and a seat at the table in conversations about Tulsa's future. They want to understand the challenges our community faces, connect with the people doing the work and envision the role they might play in moving Tulsa forward. That belief is shaping the direction of TYPROS.

We are committed to creating experiences that expose emerging leaders to the intersections of business, civic and nonprofit leadership while equipping them with the relationships, context and confidence to lead well. Our goal is not simply to develop professionals, but to help cultivate informed, engaged leaders who care deeply about the future of this city and understand their ability to influence it.

The future of Tulsa deserves the energy, creativity and perspective of the next generation. More importantly, that next generation needs meaningful opportunities to help shape it, gleaning from the leaders who are working and visioning now about how to capitalize on this momentous time for our city-- Winning the next decade looks like inspiring buy-in and cultivating a unified vision of what's next and what it is going to take to get there. Below are opportunities we are providing this month specifically to engage emerging leaders in conversations around what is next for Tulsa and what their role is in shaping what comes next. We need your help identifying the young professionals in your organization who are eager to learn and lead in this capacity.

We believe that the leaders who will shape the next 10 years of Tulsa are working in your organizations right now and we need your help identifying those people. TYPROS is committed to being a partner in shaping the young professionals that will make meaningful contributions to your organization and notable impact on our city-- but it all starts with engagement.

918 Lead

JUNE 12-13 | HYATT PLACE AND VAST BANK

TYPROS 918 LEAD

918 Lead sits at the intersection of community leadership and civic engagement. This event begins with an opening reception featuring Tulsa City Council, State House, Senate and Congressional District 1 candidates. Following that, our Saturday program will focus on putting young professionals in the room with individuals and organizations that are leading in meaningful capacities in Tulsa, inspiring them to explore what leadership in Tulsa might mean for them. Expanded from its original focus around running for office, this program offers young professionals a high-level look at leadership pathways and encourages them to think critically about what lane could be theirs to occupy. Developed by the TYPROS Government Relations Crew and TYPROS team in partnership with the Tulsa Regional Chamber's Government Affairs initiative.

--	---

Not available for the full day of programming on Saturday? That's okay. There is still an opportunity for you and your young professionals to engage with this program in a meaningful way. The opening reception happy hour is an opportunity for constituents of all ages to meet with and learn more about those seeking elected office. It's important to note that this is an event hosted by young professionals, but not an event only for young professionals. True to our belief in the importance of access and education, TYPROS is using this event as an opportunity for Tulsans of all ages to be informed and engaged headed into primaries on June 16th.

SOFT SKILLS, REAL IMPACT.

As TYPROS continues to evolve, we remain committed to aligning our programming with the expressed needs of Tulsa’s business community—particularly the growing desire for meaningful professional development opportunities for emerging talent. While connection and community remain core to the TYPROS experience, we are intentionally expanding our offerings to include more leadership development, career growth, civic education, and skill-building opportunities that help young professionals grow not only in their careers, but in their capacity to lead and contribute meaningfully to Tulsa’s future. Our goal is to serve as a trusted partner to employers and community stakeholders who are investing in the next generation of business and civic leadership.

JUNE 3RD: CAREER COST

Career growth isn’t just about moving up—it’s about understanding what comes with it.

Join us for a Lunch & Learn that unpacks the realities of advancement—the tradeoffs, expectations, and decisions that shape your path. Because climbing the ladder comes at a cost and the best leaders are the ones who choose that path with clarity.
